Objectives:

- To promote a genre-based approach to teach students to write answers to unseen texts.
- To offer teachers resources, strategies and possible writing activities specific to unseen texts.
- To discuss different dynamics (individual, in pairs, in groups, whole-class) through which to teach to write answers to unseen texts in the classroom.
- To think of the relation between different writing objectives and activities specific to unseen texts.
- To foster metacognitive and metalinguistic reflection through writing activities for unseen texts.

Contents:

- The importance of metacognitive and metalinguistic reflection in writing activities for unseen texts.
- The unseen text as a sub-genre: constructing an audience and thinking of writing purposes.
- The importance of specific language in the answers to unseen texts: words, expressions and phraseology to use and to avoid.
- The construction of cohesive and solid argumentative answers to unseen texts through different dynamics (individually, in pairs, in groups, whole-class).
- The relation between writing objectives and activities specific to unseen texts.

Methodology: 1) Discussion of frequent problems related to teaching to write answers to unseen texts 2) Exploration of specific features of the sub-genre and possible activities to teach them 3) Guided group reflection on answers provided by the participants on possible activities, resources and strategies.

This webinar is part of the series "Metacognitive and Metalinguistic Reflection for Writing Skills", which offers different tools for teachers to approach passage-based questions, essay questions and unseen texts. Although each webinar is independent from the others, each of them deals with specific aspects of those text types.

The other two webinars are:

- Webinar - IG/AS Literature. Writing Answers to Literature-Related Questions. Metacognitive and Metalinguistic Reflection in Writing Activities
- Writing Skills for Passage-Based Questions. The importance of Metacognitive and Metalinguistic Reflection (IGCSE/AS Literature)
- Writing Skills for Essay Questions. The Importance of Metacognitive and Metalinguistic Reflection (IGCSE/AS Literature)
