Objectives:

- To share the joys of reading fiction.
- To discuss a selection of short stories by Claire Keegan from her collection Walk the Blue Fields (2007).
- To exchange ideas on Keegan's narrative techniques, her recurrent themes and her fictional universe.
- To build strategies that will enable the participants to take an active role in the creation of multiple possible readings of the short stories.

Contents:

Claire Keegan's remarkable collection of short fiction Walk the Blue Fields (2007) comprises seven heart-wrenching stories that examine family bonds, buried secrets, forbidden love, missed opportunities, loss and loneliness. The stories offer a fascinating insight into contemporary life in rural Ireland, as the country struggles to shake off the yoke of its past and wake up from the nightmare of its history. The characters in "The Parting Gift", "Walk the Blue Fields" and "The Forester's Daughter" find themselves wrestling with their realities and attempting to find purpose and meaning in their lives.

Bibliography: Claire Keegan's "The Parting Gift", "Walk the Blue Fields" and "The Forester's Daughter". James Joyce's "Eveline".

Methodology:

- Reading of key sections of Claire Keegan's short stories.
- Guided group reflection and exchange of ideas on a selection of excerpts from the short stories.
- Presentation of an integrated approach to the texts.
