- Objectives:
- Explore the teaching potential of stories and picturebooks with (very) young learners: Play with the language at word level, as well as with pronunciation, rhythm, intonation, figures of speech and repetitive structures to develop language awareness.
 - Read, perform and tell stories with children to encourage interactive and collaborative learning.
 - Learn techniques and strategies to include storytelling, reading aloud and interactive and performative reading into our English language classes.
 - Design creative activities to respond to the reading experience and develop self-expression which fosters language appropriation.
 - Make our lessons memorable and meaningful!

Contents: The workshop explores the possibilities stories and picturebooks offer to help children develop language awareness and appropriation through highly interactive and collaborative activities which foster exploration and discovery. In our session, we will work with contemporary children's picturebooks and plan engaging activities to trigger the learners' creativity.

We will read a selection of picturebooks written by Mo Willems, Ed Vere, Anthony Browne, Leo Lionni, Eric Carle, Lucy Cousins, Todd Parr, Hervé Tullet, Michael Rosen, Virginie Morgand, Tomi Ungerer, Judith Kerr, N. Bryon & D. Adeola, Yasmeen Ismail, Jon Classen, Carlson Ellis, C. Naylor-Ballesteros, Kevin Henkes, Peter Reynolds, Chris Raschka, Ed Emberley, Maurice Sendak, Julia Donaldson, Oliver Jeffers, Lisa Mantchev, among others.
